TIMES-VIRGINIA

For Main Street

Minimall idea progress made

By BILL SHERROD

A proposed community mall at the Appomattox Main Street railroad depot moved a step closer to being a reality at Monday night's meeting of the Appomattox Mayor and Council.

At that meeting, the Town Council heard reports from VPI extension agent Shirley Walton, and from Philip Jamerson, representing local contractor, J. E. Jamerson and Sons, regarding transformation of the old Norfolk and Western railroad terminal into a community minimall.

Walton noted that Terry Martin, a graduate student studying architecture at Virginia Tech has been working with Jamerson on a feasibility study for the minimall. concept.

After observing the depot and the downtown area as a whole, Martin concluded that a consumer survey should be conducted to determine the types of businesses which the community would favor in a Main Street minimall.

Walton said that John McHale, a marketing and distributive education teacher at Appomattox County High School has offered to undertake the consumer survey as a community-service project for his students.

Walton said that the survey would include 750 residents, with each of the 75 marketing and DE students polling 10 residents.

Jamerson noted that his company is interested in developing the depot. "Our major concern is for filling a need in Appomattox," he said. "We are looking at the project as a community service."

"We're not looking to make a lot of money on this project," Jamerson continued. "If we break even and help the town, then we'll feel like we've done a service," he said.

"One thing we would like to request," he added.

"We'd like exclusive rights to develop this property if the feasibility study proves it's worthwhile."

Jamerson proposed a leasing agreement where the developer would be responsible for the project. We also noted that his company would like the town's cooperation in possible further developments on the downtown area.

"There might be some other ideas for improving downtown," he noted. Such ideas might include making a portion of Main Street one way or shortening the utility poles for aesthetic purposes.

"We want to fix up the town; thats the main point of it," Jamerson said. "The only thing we're asking is that you will only look at what we're doing," he added. "We want to be a good partner; we're going to put time and money into a project, we're going to do it right. We want first shot at it," Jamerson said.

While council members deferred voting on the exclusive-right request, they did allow an approval consensus.

The idea of using the railroad depot as a minimall was suggested by Walton on behalf of a group of area business persons at a council meeting earlier this year.

The business proposed for location in the mall range from a cake and craft shop to a trophy shop.

OLD MAN WINTER PAID AN EARLY VISIT to Virginia and much of the Eastern Seaboard this weekend, dumping anywhere from a few inches to more than a foot of snow on Virginia and neighboring states. Appomattox County, one of the harder-hit areas of the state, received almost ten inches of powder. The temperatures, which a week earlier had set record highs, plummeted into the teens, making driving, walking and just being outdoors on a hard surface hazardous. The white stuff did make for some good scenery, however, such as this vista just outside the town of Appomattox off Route 727. (Photo by Bill Sherrod)

Cable expansion to proceed

A billing dispute which has slowed expansion of the Appomattox cable television system is apparently near resolution, according to reports made to the Appomattox Mayor and Council at their Monday night meeting.

Vic Bosiger, representing Appomattox Cable Television, Inc., noted that expansion for the system in certain parts of town and in areas outside the town limits has been halted by Virginia Electric and Power Company due to an outstanding bill for utility pole rental.

"Vepco told us we couldn't touch a pole (for attaching the television cable) until Arco's bill is paid up," Bosiger told the council members. Arco is the company which owned the cable system before Nesbe Satellite Systems took over.

Bosiger said there is a sizable bill still outstanding for utility pole rental. The bill, which was originally the obligation of Arco, includes "unduly high" per-pole rental rates, according to Bosiger.

He noted that the bill is for 530 poles at $4 per pole. "In Blackstone the rate is $1.50 per pole," Bosiger said.

Bill Hunter, representing the Farmers National Bank, which is currently responsible for Arco's liabilities, said that the bill will be paid as soon as it is adjusted to show the actual number of poles which were used during the time that Arco had the cable television system.

"In our estimation, the pole count was too high," Hunter said. "Arco never did complete the system, and the bill is for the number of poles that would have been used if the system had been completed. I asked Vepco for a pole count."

Hunter added that the current bill is the first one submitted by Vepco."Arco never got a bill the whole time they were in business," he said. "We're ready to pay them (Vepco) as soon as we get a corrected bill."

He said the dates on the bill were irrelevant to the time frame within which Arco operated.

Hunter noted that the pole count has been conducted and a corrected bill should be forthcoming, and that the matter should be cleared up this week.

In a related matter, Bosiger said that the programming changes on the Appomattox Cable system are in progress. He said that there will be brief periods of service interruptions - ranging from about 30 seconds to two minutes -- over the next ten days while the programming changes are being made.

The changes are being made to eliminate some of the channel duplication in the current program selection.

In other business, council members voted to approve the town budget for fiscal 1983.

The budget includes general, water and sewer fund expenditures of $212,754, $566,970, and $33,305, respectively, for a total of $313,029.

Capital expenditures for the general, water and sewer funds include$35,000, $24,230, and $75, 495, respectively.

The budget also includes an $865,270 federal Environmental Protection Agency grant for a mandated sewer-improvement project, and a proposed $288,430 five-percent interest loan from the Farmers Home Administration for the mandated project.

The final part of the four-part budget is a $15,628 line item for revenue-sharing funds.

Early deadline set

The Times-Virginian newspaper will be published a day early next week.

The paper will be printed Tuesday morning and distributed to newsstands Tuesday afternoon. Mail subscribers will receive their papers on Wednesday.

Because of this early publication, deadlines will be moved up 24 hours. The deadline for all news and advertising material will be 2 p.m. Monday, Dec. 20.

Canneries to close

School community canneries located in Pamplin and the town of Appomattox will close after the last canning day this week. Patrons who desire to render lard or use the canning facilities before the closing need to secure an appointment from Mrs. Lloyd Richardson in Pamplin (248-6191 or 248-5364) or Mrs. Grace Williams for the Appomattox Cannery by calling (352-222 or 248-5794).

Both canneries have had a successful canning season this year. Production did not reach record levels, but considering factors such as amount of products available and price of cans, the volume was most satisfactory.

Canning days were scheduled to allow for patrons to have one cannery in the county to be available for at least three days of each week.

Volume figures for the year will be made available in January.

Prolonged and unseasonable mild weather came to an end over the week-end, and it was not a question of "If Winter Comes" but "go fetch the shovel, she's here." Not having an official weather bureau on Martha Street, I assumed authority and announced seven inches of snow and a 7 A.M. temperature Monday of eight degrees. That's winter, with a capitol W. Thanks to the highway workers, traffic was able to keep moving. I heard two fire alarms and the Rescue Squad was ready. Nothing brings out community spirit like severe winter weather. And passing by the parking areas at our payroll plants and business places I marveled at how much work must have been required for so many to be on time. Ah, yes, according to the "old saying" quoted in last week's column, there will be twelve more snows ere the buttercups and tulips proclaim Spring.

Thanks to W. C. Reynolds, Spout Spring, for bringing us five dressed quail.

Millions must have watched TV football over the weekend. I made several memos. One was as to flags. I always liked the expression "Keep the flag flying." But that refers to the Red, White and Blue, Old Glory. But in football officials keep the flags flying, too . . . they are the bit of cloth thrown to the ground to indicate a penalty. Another football note. I have never had on a football uniform. All that padding. But all the fellows wearing lots of padding are not football players. Some are playing Santa Claus. And I never had on a Santa Claus outfit, either. Missed a lot haven't I.

Snow brings extra birds to feeders. And more frequent refills. I am about out of small bird seed. Sparrows and a couple of Cardinals. Word must have gotten out in the bird world, for an hour ago saw two crows scouting Martha Street. Just read that for their size and weight, birds are 75% stronger than humans. Well, they lift a lot.

From an almanac. The first crossword puzzle to appear in a U.S. newspaper came out December 21, 1913, in the Sunday supplement to The New York World.

Have rounded up a couple of 1983 calendars. Next year Christmas comes on a Sunday. July 4 on a Monday.

Most every family has at least one member who gets the assignment of wrapping gift packages. At that I have absolutely no skill. Gift wrapping and handling is a major item just now.

Around town . . . saw a mass of lovely Christmas trees for sale . . . checked it out and the number of business places closed Saturday afternoons was more than I would have thought . . . you are fortunate if'n you have a "good neighbor" who helps with snow shoveling . . . I am not ashamed of my age. Next Tuesday I will be 77. But in heart and spirit I aim to be 17. Especially Christmas morning . . . what happened to all the sleigh riders? Thanks for reading and seeya around.

Christmas Mother seeking assistance

Mrs. Francis (Mildred) Elliott, 1982 Christmas Mother for the Appomattox County Department of Social Services, is asking for help in making Christmas a happy time for those less fortunate individuals in our county.

"There are a lot of children and adults alike, who will not have much for Christmas unless we help them. If you have clothing, toys, food or would like to give a donation of money, please bring it to the Appomattox County Department of Social Services office no later than Friday, Dec. 17," said Elliott.

Donors are reminded that clothing should be clean and in good repair: toys in good condition.

75-year-old victim

Fire claims local's life

A 75 year-old woman died in a house fire Sunday night just outside Concord in Appomattox County.

Maggie Tweedy, who was confined to a wheelchair, was pronounced dead on the scene by Appomattox County Medical Examiner, Dr. J. A. Mathews, after the fire had been brought under control by the Concord volunteer fire department.

A neighbor reported the fire at 8:30 p.m. Sunday, according to Concord Volunteer Fire Department spokesman Tom Shupe. Three units were dispatched and arrived on the scene within four minutes, to find the front of the frame house "completely engulfed in flames," according to Shupe.

The fire was brought under control within 20 minutes.

"One room was completely destroyed in the front of the house, and the room in which the body was found was partly destroyed," according to Shupe. "The heat from the fire was intense," Shupe said.

Paul Wade, an elderly man who lived in the house with the deceased woman, escaped injury but lost everything he had in the fire.

Shupe noted that the Appomattox Volunteer Fire Department was called in for assistance, and the Concord Rescue Squad assisted at the scene with its multi-utility truck.

While the cause of the fire is still under investigation, Shupe noted that "arson has pretty much been ruled out."

Dr. Mathews said that it could not be determined whether the Tweedy woman died of smoke inhalation or from burns.

Applications being taken

Applications are now being taken for workers in the new Pamplin garment factory, according to Jim Webb, factory manager.

Anyone wishing to apply for work at Pamplin's newest industry may contact Webb in writing at Brandy Ann Manufacturing, P.O. Box 1102, Pamplin, Va. 23958.

Lions Club to meet

The Appomattox Lions Club will meet on Thursday evening, Dec. 16 at 6:45 at the John Mosby Inn Restaurant.

Robert A. Sears will show a film, Appomattox High School in the 40's.

All members are urged to attend.
